Items For Sale:
AIRPLANE TRAILER - ENCLOSED

If you need a trailer to haul your folding wing aircraft, this would be perfect! In the past it has carried a Kolb Mark III, a Kolb Firestar, and also a Bensen and Air Command gyro. Not all at the same time, of course! You could even be a "Trailer Weenie" like Dick Stark of the Dawn Patrol who hauls his Nieuport 11 around in one like it.

Previous owners have even camped in it when going to a fly-in. Notice that it has lights inside, both AC and DC. The current owner has built a hangar at his home to keep his aircraft in and no longer needs the trailer. SIZE: 25' x 8' x 7'3"

AC & DC powered interior lights- electric & manual winches- Anti-sway hitch.
Tows real nice and a real soft ride for your plane. 2 spare tires.

Asking $4,200

HUMOR

In a tongue in cheek press release, Skyscanner suggested a number of other things airlines could charge extra for:

- A successful landing fee – to be paid upon disembarking the aircraft following a safe touchdown
- Coin operated overhead lockers, window blinds and seat lights
- Charge a premium disembarking fee – pay to get off the plane first
- Fee for releasing oxygen mask, then extra charge per minute of oxygen consumed
- Extra charge for emergency exit seats
- New charge for hand luggage based on weight
- Passenger weigh-in: surcharge of £1 per lb.
- Surcharge for children as they generate less revenue from onboard sales (they can't buy alcohol)
- Life jacket optional – extra fee if you want one
- Extra charge for newer planes
- Standing room only – extra charge for use of seat
- Charge for using electronic devices onboard
- Charge extra for the captain's weather forecast at the destination
- Extra charge for having a co-pilot
- Pay the pilot minimum wage, but allow them to make money on tips; pass their hat round on successful landing (see also: successful landing fee)
- Order planes without windows, as they will be cheaper and lighter
