SHORT FINAL

AIweb September 24, 2012

Back in the 1970s, while flying into El Paso, Texas, a pilot heard the following exchange between approach and an airline crew after repeated attempts to get the crew to reduce speed:

Approach: "Flight 123, I must have you at 120 knots right now."

Captain of Flight 123: "Son, do you have any idea of the stalling speed of this thing?"

Approach: "No sir, but I bet if you ask your co-pilot he can tell you."
